

International Collectives Adventurous Risk Portfolio

Quarterly Report: Q4 2025

Investment Objective

The International Collectives Adventurous Risk Portfolio aims to achieve capital growth by investing in holding companies or investment trusts that trade at a discount to their net asset value (NAV), while enabling international diversification from just a small number of holdings. It is designed for investors who are comfortable with a degree of risk and have a long-term investment horizon, the product is not suitable for investors who are risk-averse or whose time horizon is less than 3 years.

Quarterly Commentary

Global markets ended 2025 on a steadier footing as inflation continued to ease across most developed economies. The final quarter saw government bond yields drift lower, helping both equity and commodity markets. Emerging markets outperformed as investors became more confident about China's policy support and improving regional growth. Precious metals also rallied strongly, with silver and gold benefiting from lower real interest rates and renewed demand for safe-haven assets. Meanwhile, US equities lagged, held back by valuation concerns in several large-cap growth names.

Performance was driven by strong gains in our precious metals exposure and in several specialist equity holdings. We switched our silver position into gold toward the end of the quarter to lock in profits following silver's strong rally and to reduce portfolio risk as volatility increased. Emerging markets also contributed positively through our Aberdeen Asian Income Fund which delivered solid gains as Asian markets benefited from improving sentiment, supportive monetary policy, and attractive dividend yields. PureTech Health also performed well after successfully completing its Phase II trial for treating idiopathic pulmonary fibrosis, improving confidence in its development pipeline.

On the downside, Manchester & London underperformed as its core US growth holdings continued to lag broader global markets. Chrysalis Investments also weighed on returns due to Klarna's significant share price fall post-IPO; we believe the reaction is excessive given Klarna is only slightly over 11% of NAV and the remainder of the portfolio retains strong underlying value.

Cumulative Return

Performance is a composite made from grouping together each individual client. All client portfolios hold identical stocks, but weightings will differ depending on the start date. On the start date, each client has their own individual portfolio. Occasionally, the portfolios may hold some cash when we are between investments. For our benchmark we use the performance of an Ishares ETF that itself is built to track the MSCI World Index. Performance figures are net of all fees.

WARNING: Past Performance is not a guide to future performance.
